

2005 Joh Jos Prum offer

J.J. Prum, founded by Johann Josef Prum in 1911, has for many decades, been thought of as the best producer of riesling in the Mosel and possibly the world. The main difference between Prum and the rest of the Mosel lies in their vineyards. The estate owns 13.5ha of vines in total which are spread throughout some of the best vineyards in the Mosel. This is complemented by an older average age of the vines, 70% of which remain ungrafted. Low cropping, late harvesting and careful selection of berries at picking, means that only the best grapes make it into the winery, and wine making process involves as little intervention as possible to allow the final wines to reflect the vintage and terroir. Even the entry level Kabinett require at least a year or two in bottle to open up. From the best vintages you can expect the Spatlese and Auslese wines to last 20 or more years.

All the press has raved about 2005 in the Mosel. From the wines we have seen it is at least a good year, but a lot of experts are saying this is a great year. At the very least continues the Mosel's amazing run of good quality vintages. Such was the quality of the year that the team at JJ Prum did not bother making any Kabinett wines. All of the fruit went into Spatlese or Auslese.

No wine writer has released any specific wine notes yet. We can supply the importer's notes upon request.

All wines are 750ml bottles and are 2005 vintage unless marked otherwise.
